

SUBSTITUTE ABSTRACT

A chemical sensor has a substrate, a first metallization plane on the substrate, an electrode structure formed in the first metallization plane, a passivation layer applied to the first metallization plane and formed with contact holes, a sensitive ceramic layer on the passivation layer and in the contact holes, and a bond-promoting layer configured as a second metallization plane and between the passivation layer and the ceramic layer.